Sub Fired on Vessel as It Did Not Stop

London, Tuesday, Oct. 31, 8:14 p. m. (delayed).—The British steamer Rowanmore, from Baltimore for Liverpool, sank last week by a submarine, attempted to escape from the attacking undersea boat, but the latter continued to shell the ship until she stopped, according to affidavits from members of the crew procured by the American consul at Liverpool. The principal details of the sinking extracted from a number of affidavits are as follows:

On Oct. 28, at 8:45 a. m., the steamer was 110 miles from Fastnet when shells began to burst about her. A moment later the lookout saw the submarine's helm put hard astern, bringing the attacking craft directly across the bow. In the chaos two shells struck the bridge.

The turret continued until 3:30 o'clock, five or six shells in the meantime striking the steamer. The captain of the Rowanmore stopped his engines and halted signals that he intended to abandon the ship but the submarine continued to shell her as the boat was being lowered and when they were in the water the occupants were drabbed by shrapnel from falling shells.

The submarine then headed for the Rowanmore, while one of its officers shouted, "Get up or our way or we'll run you down," but awaited silence near the boat, passed them and then turned back, the commander calling out: "I am sorry for you but you are very foolish. You will probably all drown."

The captain of the Rowanmore was ordered on board the submarine but declined to do so, although the command was pointed at his head. After the captain had been taken on board, the submarine fired a torpedo at the Rowanmore which sank. The submarine then submerged and was not seen again. About three hours later the crew was picked up.
